

Maria Montessori supported the work of the United Nations as a forum where peace could be created. Montessori formed the Social Party of the Child in Copenhagen, 1937 and worked tirelessly in support of the Rights of the Child together with UNESCO.

The model UN Program forms a part of the Science of Peace That Maria Montessori believed was the real answer to war and conflict

“The science of Peace, were it to become a special discipline, would be the most noble of all, for the very life of humanity depends on it. So, also perhaps, does the question of whether our entire civilization evolves or disappears.”

Dr. Maria Montessori

“Avoiding war is the work of politics, establishing peace is the work of education” is one of the basic beliefs of Maria Montessori. Her vision was the reconstruction of society and the establishment of world peace through education.

As we teach peace in our classrooms, we must strive for peace in our lives, in our homes, and in our workplace. Together we are all the models of peace. We are all teaching and nourishing the peace-keepers of the future. Montessori shows us that unless we offer those principles to children, how impossible it is to create a peaceful society.

We are putting limits to children, we limit their freedoms, their intelligence, their curiosity, and in how much they can learn.

What I learned this year is that children go far beyond that point of what we think possible. A child might count millions, sew a button, or even to become a critical literate. .We just give him the freedom to work, so he develop responding to his inner laws.

In our world, freedom together with peace and equality became utopian values defended by dreamers, artist, and by some politicians.

However children are not dreamers. They just want the freedom that they need to work at their development." .Freedom and inner discipline mark down their limits and help them to orientate themselves.

The children are the father of our culture. So we offer culture to them. They'll sing it with a new voice, a new meaning and new colours. The Children are not what we think they are? Neither the message they carry... The future always looks more frightening; getting worse. But if we trust children to make creative choices what would make us doubt about their capacity to step into the world, being responsible, and engaged and with a desire to change it for the better.

Today here; we students made a small step for a better world, a world of peace Just like in John Lennon's song "imagine",Today, we do more than just imagining a world of peace, children started working on it.
